Sunday Readings ...

Good Stewardship

by Opening the Word

First Reading

The Lord never forgets the sins of those who take advantage of the poor (Amos 8:4-7).

The dire predictions of Amos may have seemed laughable to the wealthy inhabitants of the northern kingdom. The problem was that Israel had exchanged the worship of foreign gods for the worship of sex, wealth, and power, and as a consequence, their official worship had become hollow and blinded them to the plight of the poor. Sound familiar? Amos reminds us that religion isn't an insurance policy against our sins, especially those committed against the poor. The whole of the life of God's covenant people was supposed to be suffused with the Spirit of covenant love. This was to include not only their religious practice, but also their moral, political, and economic lives as well. Without a real concern for the weakest among us, the blessing of wealth can be a curse of blindness in regard to our position before God. Before God none can boast of beauty, wealth, fame, or power. Before God we're all poor.

Second Reading

Pray to the Lord, who wants everyone to be saved (1 Timothy 2:1-8).

In his first letter to Timothy, St. Paul gives us a good account of the way in which our relationship with the state ought to be regulated. In Romans 13 he says that all authority has God as its origin and is for our good. So it isn't surprising that he counsels Timothy that prayers should be offered "for kings and for all in authority." If those in authority receive the graces we ask for them, public life will allow tranquility, piety, and dignity. These three societal attributes were cherished and sought after by the ancients.

The saints have always expressed these characteristics in their persons, and St. Paul suggests that a holy society, one that's made up of individuals who've been receptive to God's grace, will express the same characteristics. We ought to pray for the grace—and then strive to receive it—which makes our society a tranquil, pious, dignified community. We owe it to our neighbor to work for the best possible social system.

Gospel

Be trustworthy in all things. Serve God, the only master, not mammon (Luke 16:1-13 [10-13]).

This week's Gospel reading sometimes shocks readers with its practicality. Is Jesus counseling us to bribe people with ill-gotten gain? This may be if one doesn't understand the story of the bad steward. However bad a steward he was, there's no evidence that he was stealing or even cheating. We're only told that he was badly handling his master's goods. So Jesus isn't commanding bad behavior in this parable. He's suggesting that even a bad manager knows how to get the most out of worldly goods when push comes to shove.

So we're being told that, if we want to be found worthy to be children of the Father, heirs of the wealth of the kingdom of God, we must first show ourselves to be good servants of his household. If we're not first good stewards of the Master's goods, he won't give us our inheritance as adopted sons and daughters. If we treat the Master's goods as if they were our own, as did the bad steward, we may never receive a reward. But if we give up our profit for the benefit of the Master and his debtors, he will supply us with an everlasting reward in the kingdom.

Reflect & Discuss

The underlying theme of this week's gospel is God's call to each of us to give away the unique gifts, talents, and resources we've been given. It is both a command to use our gifts wisely and a reassurance that God rewards those who do so.

Why does the master command and reward the steward for his actions? How is this analogous to our lives today? Why is it important that the steward was "making friends" with the debtors?

Picture yourself having to come before Jesus, the master of the house, to render an account of how you have used those gifts he has given you. Prayerfully consider whether you are using them in service for God and his people, or hoarding those gifts for yourself alone. What does Jesus say to you as you explain yourself? How do you feel about the way you have used your talents thus far?

After reflecting on two or three gifts God has entrusted to you, think of one concrete way you can use your gifts or "give them away" like the steward this week.

Use a journal to write down your thoughts, reflections and resolutions. Discuss them with a trusted friend.

Opening the Word offers prayers and insights for the Sunday Scriptural lessons. Featuring videos designed to facilitate thought and discussion for faith formation, Personal Prayer Journals and a Group Leader's Guide, Opening the Word helps you to make the most of the Sunday readings. Opening the Word is one of many programs available at Formed.org.

No servant can serve two masters.

He will either hate one and love the other,
or be devoted to one
and despise the other.
You cannot serve both God and mammon.

Luke 16:13

Prayers

Stewardship

Father, we offer our thanks for the many gifts you have given us: financial gifts and talent gifts. We pray that we become more aware that every good thing that we have comes from you. Help us to be cheerful givers, offering what we have to others out of love for you.

Help us to surrender our attachment to our possessions. Free us from our obsessions with things. Open our eyes to the true treasures that you have given us.

We offer you our parish's finances and our personal finances. Guide us in the ways of money, and let your Holy Spirit transform our hearts into hearts of charity.

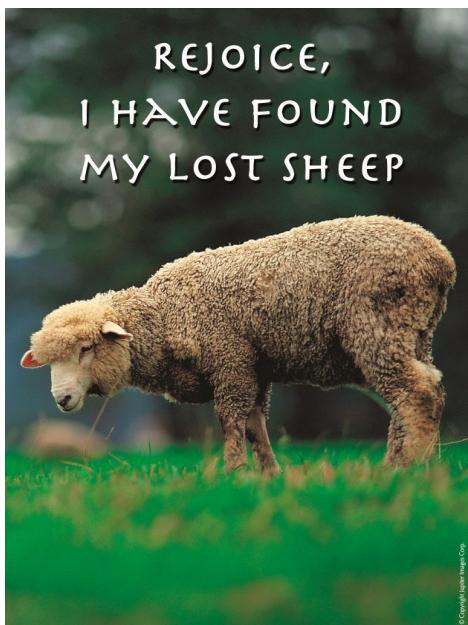

We offer you all of our talents and skills. Inspire us with ways that we may use our abilities to better serve you.

We ask this through Christ our Lord, amen.

Steps to Stewardship

To set up regular financial offerings to St Michael Parish, please visit FaithDirect.net for online giving or the church office for traditional offering envelopes.

To see if there is a ministry you are being called to join, please visit stmichaellivermore.com/ministries/directory-ministries to find a contact name and number.

Joining (or re-joining) the Church

If you are considering becoming Catholic, your first step is to attend an Inquiry meeting held on Tuesday nights at 7 pm in the Convent. Call Marjorie at 925-447-2925.

If you are Catholic and have been away from the church, the Sacrament of Confession is all that is needed to come home. If you would like support or need to brush up on the faith, call or text Tina at 925-961-7231.
